29. (Original) The method of claim 27 further comprising the step of generating print image in accordance with said amount determination.

30. (Previously Presented) The method of claim 26 further comprising the step of determining whether balance of total purchased postage value and free postage value is equal to or greater than value of requested postage.

31. (Previously Presented) The method of claim 30 further comprising the step of generating an error message in accordance with said amount determination.

32. (Previously Presented) The method of claim 30 further comprising the step of generating a print image in accordance with said amount determination.

33. (Currently amended) A PC postage system that controls the distribution of expiring free postage value, which free postage value is provided free of charge by a third party to a user and will expire after a time period has elapsed if such free postage is not used up by the user, as opposed to postage value owned by the user which will not expire after a period of time has elapsed, the system comprising:

means for storing expiring free postage value₁ provided by a third party₁ to a user in a free postage account for the user at a third party computer server, the expiring free postage value in the free postage account at the third party server remaining unavailable for use by the user unless and until part of or all of such expiring free

39. (Previously Presented) The method of managing free postage in a computer postage system of claim 38, further comprising: applying available free postage value to the request to print postage if free postage value is available; and applying purchased postage to the request to print postage if free postage value is not available.

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The closest prior art of record is an article entitled, "Neopost's Simply Postage, the first PC-based postage system to hit the retail market, is a winner", by Kathy Yakal (hereinafter referred to as 'Yakal'), U.S. Patent No. 4,864,506 to Storace, U.S. Patent No. 5,819,240 to Kara, U.S. Patent No. 6,619,544 to Bator et al.

Yakal discloses transferring free postage value, provided by a third party, to a user's postage meter (pg. 1, par. 2-4).

Storace discloses maintaining an account, corresponding to a user's postage meter, at a third party server, wherein a first portion of postage is transferred to a user's postage meter and a second portion remains available at the third party server (col 2, lines 18-25; col 4, line 64-col 5, line 5; col 8, lines 1-8).

Kara discloses replenishing a postage meter upon expiration of a postage amount (col 1, lines 46-51).

Bator et al discloses a third party providing a user with a free postage value at the user's postage meter (col 3, lines 14-18; col 9, lines 18-37)

As per claims 1, 21, 33, and 38, the closest prior art of record taken either individually or in combination with other prior art of record fails to teach or suggest storing, in the third party computer server, the second portion of said expiring free postage value in a free postage account for the user, which second portion of said expiring free postage value remains unavailable for use by the user unless and until part of or all of the second portion is transferred by the computer server to the user's postage meter during a time period set by the third party; transferring part of or all of the second portion, by the computer server, to the user's postage meter during the time period set by the third party; determining that the time period set by the third party has elapsed; and indicating to the computer server that the untransferred balance of said second portion of said expiring free postage value held for the user in the third party computer server is no longer useable. The specific allowable feature, which distinguishes the present invention over the prior art of record, is determining that the time period set by the third party has elapsed; and indicating to the computer server that the untransferred balance of said second portion of said expiring free postage value held for the user in the third party computer server is no longer useable.

Claims 2-20 are dependent upon claim 1 and thus have all the limitations of claim 1 and are allowable for that reason. Claims 22-32 are dependent upon claim 21 and thus have all the limitations of claim 21 and are allowable for that reason. Claims 34-37 are dependent upon claim 33 and thus have all the limitations of claim 33 and are allowable for that reason. Claim 39 is dependent upon claim 38 and thus has all the limitations of claim 38 and is allowable for that reason.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
